

Standard Grammar Usage and Rules Followed in Essay Writing

Do you take writing essays and academic writing casually? As if it is easy to handle? But let me tell you one thing, this is not how to treat an essay. Essays are usually academic and are written by high-school and college students as their projects and assignments to get good grades. Even though they are graded and are mandatory to be written well in terms of grammar and structure, students find it hard to follow the conventional grammatical rules of writing the essay. An essay writer is bound to use the conventional rules and the setup boundaries of the grammar used to make the writing more academic and profound.

We know that when we write, we have to follow certain rules but still when it comes to writing an essay, we face certain hurdles to follow the correct grammar usage and rules of writing the essays.

If you are worried about this, you do not have to worry anymore. Here is a guide to make you follow the usage and the rule of writing the essays in a more conventionalized way. Simple grammar rules are even compulsory in the essay to be followed. These rules are as given:

Rule 1: essays are to be written in sentences where you are ought to follow the rules of the sentence structure such as the capitalization, a full stop at the end of a sentence, question mark, or an exclamation mark where needed and it must always contain a verb.

A common error is that when you sometimes forget to write the sentence in its full form and they end up being a phrase or a clause instead. It must contain a subject and a predicate; which are the two essential components of a sentence. Every sentence you write in an essay, should be complete and make full sense.

Rule 2: subject-verb agreement is another rule to be kept in mind during your writing. Is it possible that when you write, there can be any inconsistency between the use of verbs and the subject of the sentence? Make sure to make verbs consistent with the subject of the sentences. Commonly, it is found that students' essays lack the subject-verb agreement where the subject does not agree with the verb and vice versa.

Rule 3: punctuation is the marks or the signs that help the essay to make a complete and clear sense of what is intended to be conveyed. If you are not much aware of the use of punctuation marks, make your sentences small or you can take a guide from an essay writing service. In this way, you will be able to follow the correct punctuation rules in your essay.

Rule 4: there is always an emphasis made on the usage of the vocabulary as well. What do you think is the need for vocabulary usage and its perfection? Have you ever come across or felt that sometimes to make our essays more promising and resolute we use high-end vocabulary? Yes, it is true. But there is no need to do such things. It makes essays more ambiguous and difficult to read.

Keep your words simple that can be easily understood by the readers and create less confusion. There are some pairs of words that often get confused with one another in their usage. Here you have to pay more attention to what word you are using and what meaning it is intended to convey.

Rule 5: use of apostrophes is also an element of concern when you write your essay. An apostrophe serves two functions: contractions of words and to show possession. Possession is used in essays to show certain aspects and to refer to ownership. It is acceptable and used widely while you write an essay.

But contractions are not added in the essays. They are informal ways of writing that are not acceptable in academic writing. Make sure that you avoid the use of contractions in your writing to make it free of errors and be conventional.

We are aware that essay writing is a form of academic writing; therefore, many conventions in academic writing have to be incorporated in the essays as well. You can also take help from an essay writer.

One of which I focus on is the style. When you are asked to write an essay, you might be given a different set of rules of the citation style to compose your essay accordingly. You must follow the rules stated in the instructions.

The other element in the writing is the tone. There are different forms of writing but broadly we classify them as formal and informal. The essay comes under the umbrella of formal writing, so this means that the tone of your essay should be formal and decent.

Essays are written when you have to state your point of view and argue with facts and statistics. You must keep in mind that it is quite important for you to use your information in such a way that is clear and represents that it is an essay.

Of all the information we have and use when we write an essay, we still are not very much clear about writing the essays. When I write my essay, I make sure it follows the pattern of paragraphs which has a thesis statement at the end of the first paragraph and a topic sentence at the start of every body paragraph.

If you follow these instructions and grammar rules in your essay, then you will be able to convey your message more easily.
